

10 Reasons Why Two Kittens Are Better Than One

While the decision to adopt a kitten is an exciting event, it should not be entered into lightly. Kittens require an enormous amount of care, which, of course, is compensated by the extreme pleasure of watching them grow and develop. Sometimes, it is better to adopt two kittens, whether this is your first cat or an addition to a feline family. Below are some various creative and solid arguments to explain why two kittens are better than one.

1) You'll save two lives instead of one.

During kitten season, it's one more kitten that will get a home instead of growing into an adult which will decrease its chance of getting adopted. It is entirely true the 15-month-old cat you see in the shelter today is very likely a holdover from last year's crop of kittens. Another way of looking at it is that it's better to get all the kittens adopted out right away, to give the older cats a better chance at finding homes.

2) One kitten can become lonely.

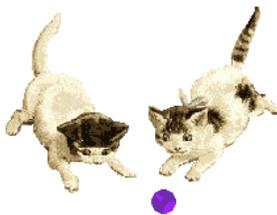

A single kitten left alone during the day can become lonely and bored, which can lead to mischief. Two kittens, especially if they are siblings will never be lonely. In fact, you'll often find situations in shelters and rescue group adoption where a cage will contain two kittens with a sign, "These kittens may be adopted only as a pair." Shelter volunteers recognize that siblings really need to stay together.

3) One kitten can just drive an older cat nuts.

Although it might sound contrary, an older, established cat will probably more easily accept two kittens better than one. One kitten will want the older cat to be a playmate, or worse, tease and pester the senior cat which can cause stress to an older cat. The kitten in return, will be "rewarded" for his playful efforts with hisses and swats. Two kittens will expend their energy in play with each other, leaving their older "aunt or uncle" to relax in peace.

4) Two kittens will "self-train."

Kittens learn by copying. If one kitten is quick to learn appropriate litter box use, the other will be likely to copy. They also help each other with grooming; wash-up after meals soon becomes a ritual with two kittens.

5) They help each other burn off energy.

Even the most devoted cat parent can quickly become exhausted by trying to keep up with the energy of a single kitten. Two kittens will wear each other out, leaving their human free to just enjoy watching them. The downside to this, is sometimes you have double trouble, too.

This information is provided to you as a courtesy by:

Second Chance

Wildlife Sanctuary

(905) 649-8282

www.second-chance.ws

10 Reasons Why Two Kittens Are Better Than One

6) Fewer behaviour problems with two kittens.

Many people who experience behaviour problems with kittens find that some of them go away when they adopt another playmate. What may be perceived as mischief is often just the result of boredom. Much like their human counterparts, kittens sometimes misbehave because "negative attention is better than no attention".

7) Curiosity overcomes "food finickyness."

If one kitten is finicky about food, the belligerence is often overcome by curiosity at what its sibling is eating. (Feed one cat Same Old, the other cat New Stuff, and they both end up tasting the new stuff.)

8) They act as pillows for one another.

Kittens will often play so hard that they simply flop where they are, and more likely than not, they will flop next to (or on top of) each other. There is no sight so endearing as two kittens curled up together for a nap. Their peaceful innocence can soften the heart of even the grumpiest curmudgeon, and the sight of that blissful moment will wash clean the slate of their previous misdoings.

9) Having two kittens is insanely fun.

They are just so much darn fun to watch!

10) Fill in the blanks.

I'm sure you can come up with your own inimitable reasons why adopting two kittens is better than one.

If you're thinking of adopting a kitten, do give some consideration to the reasons why you should choose two instead of one.

This information is provided to you as a courtesy by:

(905) 649-8282

Second Chance

Wildlife Sanctuary

www.second-chance.ws